Government Puts Pressure On For Settlement Of Rail Dispute

ant. Steelman and reconversion director John W. Snyder then conferred with representatives of the railroads. White House aides said the talks were "exploratory". It was believed they were held preliminary to resuming negotiations between the disputants today.

President Truman had said Saturday that he was confident progress could be made toward settlement, but he did not disclose the basis for his confidence. However, it was believed he would support the unions in their demand for liberalization of working rules.

Opinion Divided
In the coal mine dispute, opinion was divided on whether Mr. Truman would order seizure of the coal mines as he did the railroads. One government official predicted the 3,000 bituminous mines would be seized by midweek. Other administration sources, however, disagreed. They still hoped that negotiations could be resumed.

A reliable informant said the President conferred shortly before leaving for Kansas with Charles O'Neill, of the mine owners' negotiation committee. The same source believed president John L. Lewis of the AFL United Mine Workers also had met separately with Mr. Truman, but neither Lewis nor O'Neill would comment.

No developments were anticipated within the next day or two. Newspaper Shortage Faced
In another important labor dispute, western newspapers in Canada and the United States faced a newspaper shortage as more than 50,000 lumber workers in five northwestern states threatened to strike. States affected would be Washington, Oregon, Northern Idaho, northern Montana and northern California.

At Portland Ore., officials of the International Woodworkers of America (CIO) said members had voted to strike if current negotiations with timber operators fail. The union demands a raise from $1.05 an hour to $1.17 1/2.

Meanwhile, a strike by 37,000 members continued in British Columbia. The walkout already had caused a shortage of newspaper, and many papers in the Northwest were planning to reduce their size.

New Rail Strike Feared
In another railroad dispute, 15 non-operating brotherhoods and unions were expected to announce today results of a strike vote among their 1,000,000 members. The non-operating organizations had turned down a 16-cent hourly raise recommended by an arbitration board, and demand a 14 cent increase above that. Leaders said the vote undoubtedly would favor a strike.

One bright spot in the labor picture was the return to work of about 5,000 iron miners in the Lake Superior district, scheduled for this week. Settlements have been effected in numerous mines in Minnesota and Michigan on the basis of an 18 1/2 cent hourly raise. The latest agreement was reached between the CIO United Steelworkers and the Snyder Mining Company, the Charleston Mining Company, and the Pickands Mathers Company, employing a total of about 3,500.

Across the United States, at least 652,900 workers were on strike, or idle because of work stoppages, including the 400,000 United Mine Workers, most of whom are back in the pits on a two-week truce.

Largest strike exclusive of the miners was that of 30,000 workers in five different Allis-Chalmers plants in four states. A total of 16,500 steel workers still were out in various mills and the coal strike had idled an additional 65,000 steel workers plus more than 5,000 automotive employees.

RAEDER ADMITS GERMANS BUILT SUBS SECRETLY

NUERNBERG, May 20—Grand Admiral Erich Raeder disclosed today that the German navy was able to commission a submarine in 1935 just 11 days after the Anglo-German treaty permitted submarines because it had been assembling them secretly more than 10 years.

Raeder said the Germans began their submarine construction shortly after the Versailles treaty was signed, in violation of that treaty, by working through a shadow firm in Holland. Two German submarines were completed by 1925, he said.

When Adolf Hitler reached power, the admiral told the war crimes tribunal, submarine parts were manufactured in Holland and Finland and stored in Germany.

Nation Mourns Death Of Booth Tarkington

ing and love of children was written into "Penrod" and "Penrod and Sam," had no children of his own. His closest relatives were three nephews.

Although confined to bed, Tarkington continued to write, dictating to his secretary, Miss Elizabeth Trotter. Last year his "Image of Josephine" was a Literary Guild best seller.

In recent years he had shied away from appearing in public. His last appearance was last March 7 when he attended the world premiere of a play adapted from his novel, "Alice Adams," at the Indianapolis civic theater.

Tarkington was one of the most prolific writers of his generation. Beside his novels he wrote many plays. Twice he won the Pulitzer prize for literature with his novels "The Magnificent Ambersons" and "Alice Adams."

Among his best known works was "Seventeen," "The Gentleman from Indiana," "Penrod," and "Monsieur Beaucaire." His play "The Man From Home" was a Broadway success. Many of his books were made into movies, and Tarkington, who earned almost nothing in the first five years of his career, became rich.

His home here was an art collector's paradise, for the shy, unassuming author loved art as well as literature. His collection of both paintings and objects d'art was among the finest in the country. It was valued at an estimated half million dollars. During his youth Tarkington became interested in painting while touring Italy and for a time considered it as a career.

Although widely traveled, Tarkington spent most of his life in Indiana. He often said he liked to travel, but that he was "a Hoosier first." He said he never attained success until he began writing about Indiana and its people. Indianapolis, he said, was a "part of myself."

The mild-mannered gentleman of letters was born in Indianapolis July 29, 1869, the son of John Stevenson and Elizabeth Tarkington. He married Lauree Louise Fletcher of Indianapolis on June 18, 1902. After her death, he married Susan Robinson of Dayton, O., in 1912.

He said that writing was "the hardest job I've ever struck." "I'd rather be a stone mason," he said, "so far as my work is concerned. I don't care a whit about entertaining my readers. What I've tried to do is show the truth about people's insides."

DSM PRESENTED TO COL. GOBLE FOR SERVICES

COLUMBUS, May 20—Col. Chester Goble, state director of selective service, was awarded the distinguished service medal in a ceremony today in the office of Gov. Frank J. Lausche for "exceptionally meritorious service."

Brig. Gen. Carlton A. Dergusch, deputy selective service director, who came from Washington, awarded the medal to Colonel Goble and legion of merit awards to Col. Carl D. Wahl and Col. Howard E. Boucher of the Ohio selective service headquarters.

"Colonel Chester W. Goble performed exceptionally meritorious service from September 1940 to September 1945 as procurement officer, as acting director and later as state director of selective service for Ohio," the state director's citation read.

"Ohio fully satisfied the quota of men for the armed forces, and, aided by Colonel Goble's sound administration of deferment policies concurrently established records of industrial and agricultural production unprecedented in the history of the state."

Colonel Boucher was cited for meritorious service as chief of the medical division and assistant state director for Ohio, while Colonel Wahl was cited for meritorious service as manpower chief of the Ohio state selective service headquarters.

ELKS PLAN INITIATION
Circleville Lodge No. 77, B. P. O. Elks will meet Tuesday night following a dinner at 6:30 o'clock. Leeland E. Pontius, secretary, said the program includes initiation and a floor show. N. E. Reichelderfer is exalted ruler.

BIKE TAGS ON SALE
Police Chief William F. McCrady called attention, Monday, that 1946 bicycle license tags are now on sale at Circleville police headquarters. The price is 25 cents.

defend our liberties to the last breath and man, woman and child."

Fighting in the rugged frontier areas was expected to be largely of a guerrilla nature. Tehran government troops have been moving into towns near the Azerbaijan frontier for several weeks as Russian troops moved northward. Heavy mountain snows have handicapped troop movements.

American newspaper correspondents reached Tabriz at the end of last week. Souki reported no Russian troops to be seen in the provincial capital, and said the consensus was that all the Red army had left the country. He reported a belligerent atmosphere in Tabriz, with many Azerbaijan soldiers in Russian uniforms marked with the Azerbaijan emblem.

Unsuccessful negotiations between Ghavam and the Azerbaijan delegation broke down over the Azerbaijan regime's demand that it appoint its own army commander and governor, while staying nominally within the Iranian national framework.

Ghavam offered a seven-point program for increasing Azerbaijan autonomy, but refused to grant this demand on grounds that it would sever all Tehran control over the province. Since Pishavari returned to Tabriz, the Azerbaijan radio has been issuing heated statements about the people's readiness to fight for liberty.

JOHN K. TENER, EX-GOVERNOR, BALL PLAYER DIES

PITTSBURGH, May 20—John W. Tener, Irish immigrant who became president of the National Baseball league, governor of Pennsylvania and a leader in business and fraternal affairs, died yesterday from a heart ailment. He was 82.

The former governor was stricken May 1. Burial services will be held Wednesday.

Although living in semi-retirement the past few years, Tener daily visited his downtown office where he was a partner in the Tener-Lowry Insurance Company.

Tener was born in county Tyrone, Ireland, July 25, 1863, one of a family of ten children. He came to America at the age of 10 and was soon attracted to American sports.

A star pitcher in the gloveless era, Tener played with a Haverhill, Mass. team in the old New England league in 1885. In 1888-'89 he toured the world with the famed A. G. Spaulding troupe. He played two years with the Chicago Nationals when Adrian (Cap) Anson was its star.

SOLONS STATE CONGRESS WILL DEFEAT MERGER

WASHINGTON, May 20—The chairmen of the senate and house naval affairs committees assured the Navy today that congress will kill President Truman's present program for merger of the Army and Navy.

In a joint letter to Secretary of Navy James V. Forrestal, the two lawmakers—Sen. David I. Walsh, D. Mass., and Rep. Carl Vinson, D. Ga.—said the consolidation actually would "widen the breach" between the Army and Navy and completely disorganize the nation's defense against future aggression.

They advised him not to try to work out any compromise with Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson. Patterson is one of the plan's chief proponents. Forrestal is the leader of the opposition.

Walsh and Vinson told Forrestal that there were "major defects" in Mr. Truman's plan. They objected particularly to the proposal that the air forces be placed on a co-equal status with the ground and sea forces.

VETS LAUNCH DRIVE

WASHINGTON, May 20—The American veterans committee today announced a campaign to "make every veteran a voter." It started by mailing its members voting records of congressmen on key issues, and predicted the veteran vote would swing the decision in many close contests.

PRESIDENT GETS THIRD MISSOURI COLLEGE DEGREE

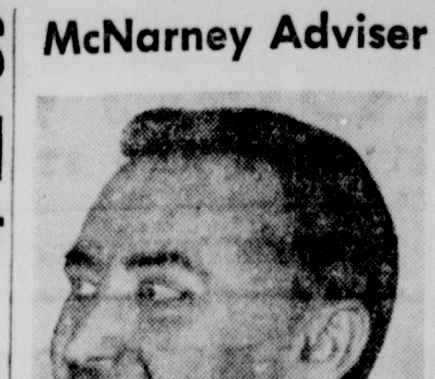

LIBERTY, Mo., May 20—President Truman comes to this old western Missouri college town today to receive an honorary degree at the 87th commencement of William Jewell college, his third such degree from Missouri schools since he entered the White House.

The town of 4,500 was all set for a big day. Never before had a President visited the 122-year-old town, settled by southern Democrats, and still a place where a Republican campaign placard is a rarity.

The city, about two miles from the Missouri river, is just across the river from the President's home-town, Independence. Both cities date their organized history back to 1824, and both were settled by southerners.

said he believed Moshe Shertok, head of the political department of the agency who is in London, would inform the British of the agency's willingness to take part in consultations.

(In London a foreign office spokesman said the possibility of a round table discussion of the report in London, while not entirely ruled out, was considered remote by informed quarters.)

The Arab and Jewish leaders refused to say what subjects were discussed with Cunningham. Other sources said the invitation was for separate consultations in London. The matter was expected to be put before the higher committee and the Jewish agency.

Cunningham spent several hours at Emir Abdullah's palace at Amman before returning to Jerusalem to issue invitations to Arab and Jewish leaders to come to his residence.

Informed circles believed Cunningham told Abdullah that Britain was calling Arab and Jewish leaders into consultation before pronouncing a final British stand on the Palestine report. They said consultations probably would be held in London.

An Arab guard shot two Jews as they left an army camp Saturday while Tel Aviv was the scene of another series of auto thefts believed to have been carried out by members of the extremist Irgun Zvai Leumi.

FOOD SHORTAGE MAY CONTINUE FOR FOUR YEARS

WASHINGTON, May 20—Sir John Boyd Orr, director of the United Nations food and agriculture organization, warned today that the world food shortage will continue three or four years.

He spoke as the 18-country food organization met in emergency session to plan the feeding of hungry millions.

Orr asked the delegates not to waste discussing the size of the coming harvest.

"Following the 1946 harvest, the world will be as badly off for food as it was at the time of the 1945 harvest because this time we will have no great reserve of food carried over from the previous year," he said.

"When there are sufficient supplies of cereals to prevent hunger, there will be a further period of shortage of animal products essential for health, owing to the diversion of cereals from animal feeding to direct human consumption. Thus we are faced with a three or four year shortage."

MacArthur Cracks Down On Jap Demonstrators

criticized attempts to spread Communistic propaganda. He emphasized, however, that the Communist party enjoyed equal rights with other groups.

The Communists have organized several mass demonstrations recently outside the emperor's palace. Yesterday they tried unsuccessfully to force their way into the palace grounds.

American troops in armored cars patrolled the streets during the demonstration.

The Communist leader, Kyuichi Tokuda, and Kanji Kato, a Social Democrat leader, led a sitdown strike of 19 men on Yoshida's doorstep, demanding his resignation and more food for the people.

The men disbanded after a five and one-half hour demonstration. They issued a statement defending an "orderly mass movement organized by labor as the only method of preventing food riots." The demonstrators said they disbanded when Yoshida sent word through spokesman that he would not see them.

They pointed out that "demonstrations by organized labor should be sharply discriminated from spontaneous and unorganized mob actions." The statement expressed confidence that MacArthur's statement was not aimed against themselves.

Ritsu Ito, a Communist leader and one of the sit-down strikers, denied that Communists were responsible for violence and intimidation. Kazuyuki Kobayashi, self-styled organizer of the "Japan CIO," asserted that Communists should not be given all credit for the recent demonstrations. He said his own organization and other labor groups also participated in the marches.

ARMY PROBING WOMAN'S DEATH AT FRANKFURT

FRANKFURT, May 20—Army investigators sought today to reconstruct the mysterious death of petite Gertrude Knapp, 38, whose nude, bruised and unconscious body was found early Sunday on the back porch of a bachelor officers' apartment block.

Miss Knapp died last night at the 9th general hospital.

First indications were that Miss Knapp had leaped or fallen from the apartment of an officer where she was said to have gone after leaving a party at the Casino night club inside the U. S. Army headquarters compound.

The officer, whose name was not disclosed, was first placed under restrictions but these were lifted today although a recommendation for disciplinary action was to be made by the investigators.

er all price and related controls are removed from the livestock and meat business, the sooner the industry can restore order."

The institute said that the meat industry has always known that current OPA regulations were completely unworkable, but that OPA sources have declared that they will be enforced.

The report said that 10 companies which normally furnish beef to millions of consumers dressed only 57,697 cattle during the week ending May 11. This is 48 per cent less than figures for the same week last year and 64 per cent less than the corresponding period of 1941.

ASHVILLE LOSES 3-0 THRILLER IN SCO LEAGUE

Chillicothe And Jamestown
Win Other Games in Baseball Circuit

After holding undefeated Jeffersonville scoreless for seven innings Sunday afternoon, Asheville lost 3 to 0 a South Central Ohio Baseball league game at Asheville.

Two runs in the eighth and another in the ninth ruined the pitching duel between Asheville's Harper and H. Haddix of Jeffersonville.

The Reds could get only three hits off Haddix. He struck out 11 and walked two. Harper gave up nine hits. The only extra-base blow was a double by Pitcher Haddix.

A triple play, from N. Black to Dave Walters, was the fielding feature of the contest.

Chillicothe Mead Papermakers kept the league lead by scoring their fifth win, 5-3 over Milledgeville at the latter's field. Jeffersonville is unbeaten but has played one less game than Chillicothe.

In the other game played Jamestown edged Greenfield 8-7 at Jamestown. Washington at Sabina was postponed because of wet grounds.

Greenfield got only three hits but stayed right in the ball game because of six Jamestown errors. Jamestown got eight hits and was helped with five Greenfield errors.

Chillicothe got eight hits, one more than Milledgeville. A big fourth inning in which they made three runs won for the Papermakers. Pollard struck out nine Milledgeville batters and Hammond fanned five Papermakers.

MIDGET RACING OPENS TUESDAY AT FAIRGROUNDS

COLUMBUS, May 20—Final preparations were made today for the opening tomorrow night of weekly midget auto racing at the Ohio State Fairgrounds half-mile track.

The midgets will stage the first event on the fairgrounds track since it was taken over by the Army early in the war. The oval has been rebuilt, and racing officials say it has been made into one of the fastest half-mile tracks in the country.

Among the first drivers to file entries for tomorrow night's card was Johnnie Wohlfell of Pontiac, Mich., who will race his sleek $6,000 Offenhauser Special.

Entries also were received from Bill Spears of Pittsburgh, Bernie Kelly of Port Clinton, O., Gays Biro of Peninsula, O., Wally Stokes of Honolulu and Wild Bill Boyd of Steubenville, O.

Cards Take First Place in
National; Heusser Blanks
Dodgers As Reds Win

NEW YORK, May 20—Pitchers Spud Chandler and Dave Ferriss were in a battle today for the major league shutout championship that was overshadowing other phases of the feud between the Yankees and Red Sox.

The arguments still rage of course over Ted Williams versus Joe DiMaggio as a hitter. Joe Gordon versus Bobby Doerr as a second baseman, and the Yankees against the Red Sox for the pennant. But any Boston fan will start a baseball filibuster at the suggestion that Chandler is better than Ferriss. Yankee supporters are just as vocal if the Ferriss forces open a debate.

On the record, it was hard to choose between the Dixie right handers. Each pitched his third shutout yesterday in a day highlighted by fine hurling.

Chandler, the "Georgia Bulldog" snuffed off the Indians with three hits to win, 2 to 0 as the Yankees won two at Cleveland. Charley (Red) Ruffing, helped by DiMaggio's two-run homer, tossed a seven-hit 7 to 1 Yankee victory in the afterpiece.

Ferriss topped Detroit 4 to 0 on seven hits for his second straight shutout. However, Hal Newhouse gave the Tigers a 3 to 1 second game four-hit victory which reduced Boston's league lead to four and a half games over New York. Homers by Dick Wakefield and Jimmy Outlaw gave him his victory margin.

Washington took a firmer hold on fourth place with 4 to 3 and 7 to 1 victories at Chicago. The Nats beat Ted Lyons with a two run rally in the ninth of the opener, handing the 46-year-old pitcher his fourth defeat against one win. Johnny Niggeling held Chicago to five hits to win the second game. Mickey Vernon was Washington's hitting star with two homers, two doubles, a triple, and a single in the two games. Jeff Heath also got a Nat homer and Murrell Jones and Bob Kennedy homered for Chicago in the two games.

The Athletics won their first double header of the season, 4 to 3 and 13 to 2 at St. Louis. Luther Knerr, coasting along behind 18-hit support including homers by George McQuinn and Hal Peck, had no trouble winning his first game in the afterpiece. Chuck Stevens and Hank Helt hit first game St. Louis homers and Walt Judnich got one in the second.

The Cardinals again took over first place in the National with 9 to 5 and 4 to 0 victories at Philadelphia. Lefty Harry Brecheen's six-hit shutout was the highlight since it ended his three-game losing streak and dispelled fears he was losing his stuff. Max Lanier gained his sixth straight victory without pressure in the opener with 15-hit backing. Johnny Wyrostek got a Philly homer, the first off Lanier this season, while in the second game, Stan Musial hit for the loop for the Cards.

Ed Heusser stopped the Dodger heavy hitting with a 4 to 0 victory for Cincinnati at Brooklyn. He

RED BIRDS AID SAINTS' CLIMB BY LOSING TWO

By United Press
St. Paul and Louisville virtually were tied for first place in the American Association today as the result of the Saints' double victory Sunday and the Colonels' split of two games.

Louisville has won and lost a single contest less than St. Paul and is on top by seven percentage points.

The first game was a 6-0 shutout and the second a 9-6 slugfest in St. Paul's sweep of the double-header at Columbus yesterday. The Colonels won the first 4-0 and Kansas City took the second 3-1 at Louisville.

In other double headers Minneapolis and Toledo divided, the Hens taking the initial game 4-0 and the Millers the afterpiece 2-0 at Toledo. Milwaukee also split, the Brewers winning 6-3 and then dropping the second game to the Indians 4-3 at Indianapolis.

The two-hit hurling of Harry Taylor, St. Paul pitcher, shut out the Red Birds in the first game while the Saints were making every one of six hits count for a run. In the second game, the Saints jumped on the offerings of three Columbus pitchers with a 16-hit attack.

DECISIVE YEAR

PRESIDENT Truman said early this year that it must be "a year of decision". As the months go by, the truth of his statement grows clearer. He obviously means national decision especially.

But has the foresight of the President and his advisers been duly matched with action? Or have they merely allowed themselves to be pushed ahead without seizing the controls themselves to steer the ship of state?

A leading nonpartisan paper, The Cleveland Plain Dealer, expresses sad disappointment regarding governmental achievements. It says:

"Looking at the record, no one can possibly fail to be disappointed in what the government has done, and still more at what it has failed to do. While it has resisted bitterly all legislative proposals looking toward the prevention of strikes and the assurance of uninterrupted industrial operation, it has failed to offer any workable alternative, and thus has brought upon the nation not only a series of costly strikes, but has been largely responsible for the sense of uncertainty and insecurity which is the worst of all enemies to orderly reconstruction."

As regards the vagaries and personal animosities of John L. Lewis, who has stirred up the biggest and most venomous fight in recent political history, both he and the public seem to have come a long way from coal, where the problem arose. A really decisive government would keep the public mind on the ball, would it not? And make some kind of decision which would get the coal out of the ground, regardless of the egocentric push for power of one man?

DEAD BERLIN

THE usual American idea of Berlin, perhaps, as it stands today, is that it will be rebuilt as many other wrecked cities have been after former wars. But recent information indicates that it is far too much demolished for any possible salvaging. There are pleasant villages and homes not far from the ruined city, but Berlin itself is such a tremendous mass of twisted and shattered wreckage that, except for age, it suggests the ancient deserts of Arabia and other antique habitations of man abandoned thousands of years ago.

This is what modern war does to cities recently alive like our own, and blest with all the activities in which civilized men have engaged since the beginning of human history and its manifold creations. And to a meditating American, even though far removed by a merciful Providence from such fate, here is what might happen to us Americans in our own land, if the deadly struggles of our recent modern warfare should be renewed, with the grim "improvements" that a next war would bring.

With Jack Gaver Along Broadway

NEW YORK, May 20—Those daytime serials of the air go right along surviving the slings and arrows of outraged radio columnists. An outstanding example is the revival of the "Myrt and Marge" saga, one of the pioneer programs which kept housewives tearfully happy in their kitchens for years.

"We passed 175 stations last Monday," said Larry Finley, head of the Finley transcriptions, in reporting on the number of current outlets of the program. The episodes are recorded in New York and the platters shipped throughout the country to stations which contract for the series.

Myrtle Vail and her daughter Margaret wrote and played the title roles for years. Then the daughter died in childbirth some four years ago and that was the end of the program. Several times the mother was approached to revive it, but no one was able to persuade her to take the step until Finley turned the trick early this year. The scripts being used are revisions of the old ones.

"Myrt" doesn't act or write now, but she is on hand to direct the recording proceedings. Many of the characters are played by original creators of the roles.

"We get some of the most amazing fan mail," Finley said. "For example, women are always writing that they have donated to various charities in the name of 'Marge' or that they light candles in church for her."

Finley is a big believer in transcribed radio programs. He has another in the works, "Flight With Music," and currently is making records against time because the story is due to visit Marion Hutton in June. Marion is the singing hostess on the show and Finley has to have at least 40 platters finished before she has to quit work. His next project in this field will be recording for radio use Broadway plays. Each play will be completed in five 15-minute platters, with the idea being that a station will run them on five successive days.

But radio is only a part of the operations of the fabulous Finley, a tall broadshouldered fellow

A DIPLOMA—PASSPORT TO LIFE

WORLD travelers can tell us a great deal about passports — that they are the "magic key" opening doors to enchanting scenes and people of many countries and climes. But most of us are not world-travelers: visiting the rest of our earth is not for us. And yet the majority of us have in our possession a kind of passport, too. It was presented to us on a memorable evening in our lives. With the Apostle Paul we could say, as we received it, "I have finished the course." And with our diplomas clutched tightly in our perspiring hands we forsook the familiar scenes of one realm, only to enter the most enchanting school of all—LIFE!

Our newspapers tell us much about this school's Baccalaureate and that school's Commencement; Miss So-and-So graduates from Such-and-Such college; Joe Blank receives high honors as he leaves the campus of Alma Mater. Diplomas are passed out almost recklessly in thousands of high schools and colleges during May and June. "Almost recklessly?" Well, hardly—diplomas must be earned and one must prove himself qualified to merit the cherished writing in English or Latin.

What then? Do we relegate the sheepskin to attic or gaudily frame it and shortly forget it? Do we automatically choose the rut we'll dwell in for the next fifty years and as automatically fall into it? Does the diploma become an end in itself, or will we let it prove to be a passport to our realizing the dreams we dreamt in high school or college? Instead of becoming an end in itself and growing yellow and musty (like many of its recipients), will it become a means to a still higher end—the resolving of our youthful plans and dreams into castles of mortar and brick?

By now it should be fairly evident that these words are addressed to the youth of our community who are closing the book on one period of life, only to turn to the introductory pages in a shining new volume.

If you will let it happen, that is, if you will permit your newly-acquired diploma to be your passport to Life, what magnificent vistas will be revealed! If you have enthusiasm, your passport will open doors for you that are closed to others. Pasteur had it. He refused all social engagements during certain periods of his life. Edison slept in his laboratory. With enthusiasm a young man and a young woman can plan a home; a Joe DiMaggio can play baseball; an aged woman can raise flowers; a scientist will spend his life searching for a disease germ; a sociologist will strive to lift the lowest stratum of society; a Will Mayo will go to slaughterhouses, while other physicians are content with the daily round, and there he will spend day after day practicing dissections on the eyes of slaughtered pigs and sheep so that he may operate more skillfully on the eyes of man.

And too, if you are prepared, your diploma-passport will open more magic doors to still grander views. Preparation includes mastering certain subjects, but it also means mastering one's self. You may master textbooks galore, but unless you have patience, self-control and self-knowledge, your handsome diploma won't mean much more than the woodpulp from which it was born.

AT ONCE OR LATER

SUCCESSFUL defense, by a player fortunate enough to hold the ace of trumps, depends entirely, sometimes, on when he uses that big card. In some situations he should lay it down, then lead another trump to reduce the declarer's ruffing power. In others, when the declarer leads trumps, he should use it at once so he can lead a suit which his partner can ruff before the latter's trumps are gone. Then there are circumstances under which he should delay its play long enough to let his partner make a discard which will signal him what suit to return.

West opened his singleton diamond, which South won with the A. The spade Q was led and West came right in with the A because he wanted to conserve as many of his trumps as possible for ruffing. His job now was to get East in the lead, and he decided that the club suit was the best chance. But South won the club Q with the K and took out the other trumps with the J and 10. Three diamond tricks then enabled South to discard a heart, so that he lost only one other trick. In hearts, thus making his contract plus an extra trick.

West thought it was highly unfortunate that he guessed wrong on which suit to lead after taking his spade A. There was nothing unfortunate about it, simply bad bridge. West should have led the first trump trick go by, saving his A for the second one. It was highly likely that South, who lacked the top two trump honors, had a five-card suit. In that case, East could have only one spade. So if West ducked the first trump, it was a virtual certainty East would have discarded on the second.

If West had followed that procedure, East would have put his heart 7 on the second spade, as a signal to lead a heart. A small heart then to East would have been won by the A, a diamond would have been returned for a ruff as the defenders' third trick, and the heart K would have defeated the contract.

Dermatitis Due To Contact With Oils

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

SOMETIMES, the high cost of making a living must be figured to include those disorders due to substances with which the worker must come into direct contact.

One of these is dermatitis or inflammation of the skin. It is estimated that one out of every 100 workers suffers from this sort of rash and Doctor Samuel M. Peck of New York City believes that one-fifth of these cases are due to contact with petroleum products and greases.

Fortunately, he has also some helpful suggestions for those who must work with these skin-irritating oils.

Cutting Oils

The most common of such irritants used in modern industry are cutting oils. There are two kinds of these oils. One kind, the soluble type, consists of what is known as sulfonated petroleum oil. This product diluted with oil is used for cooling cutting tools and to prevent rusting.

The other type of oil, the insoluble type, or one that does not go into solution, also is used on machine tools. This type is responsible for what is known as cutting oil acne. It produces a rash on the backs of the forearms and thighs.

Bare Arms

This is due to the fact that men usually work with bare arms and the thighs are continually exposed to contact with oil-soaked trousers. The rash usually begins as inflammation of the hair roots. Then pimples form in which pus gradually develops.

The petroleum oils may also take the fat out of the skin. In older persons with a dry skin this may lead to cracking and a generalized skin inflammation. Continuous exposure to these oils and greases over a long period of years may lead to the development of small, flat, brown, wart-like growths, particularly on the back of the hands.

To prevent this type of skin disturbance, contact between the worker's skin and the oils must be reduced to a minimum. This means that the machine should be kept as free from grease and dirt as possible. The oil should be changed at least once a week, according to Dr. Peck.

There should be adequate washing facilities with hot and cold water, and shower baths should also be provided. Workers should have clean towels daily and should have clean water at the machine so that the oil can be wiped off the hands and forearms as often as is necessary.

Skin cleansers should also be available. Clean work clothes should be provided daily, and, to protect the exposed portions of the body, sleeves through which the oil does not pass, and aprons and gloves of similar material should be provided.

Protective ointments also are useful but these need be employed only on those parts of the body which cannot be protected in other ways.

STARS SAY—

For Monday, May 20
BY GENEVIEVE REMBLE
Monday's astrological forecast is for an exceptionally lively and progressive day, with the mind keyed to ambitious performance despite setbacks, frustrations, obstacles and blocked effort. There seems to be a definite and decisive as well as exciting opening to break down all barriers and mount to high achievement against all odds. Avoid all forms of extravagance in actions as well as funds and energies. Play safe with all resources.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of definite opportunity for worthwhile objectives and ambitions, yet such must be won with determination, firmness, objective realism and sound plans and tactics.

The Journey Home

Copyright, 1945, by Zelda Popkin

SYNOPSIS
DON CORBETT, young AAF bombardier, just back to Miami from a stint in Europe, suffers a rude awakening as he takes a journey to his Brooklyn home on a 21-day leave.

CHAPTER THREE
SUNDAY, golden and still, lay over Miami.
The slightest of breezes tossed the palms with fingertip tenderness not to wake up the tourists, exhausted with "lancing and drinking and rolling the dice; the natives worn out by selling and serving. A gentle jade sea rocked in the sun, warming a sybarite's bath. In green patios facing the surf, the water lilies, up with the dawn, watered in flapping bathrobes, blood-red silhouettes on an azure sky.

Taxis rolled over the causeway from the white sugar towers at the Beach, through the silent, shut streets of the city. Sleepy, bronzed faces peered through their windows, taking last looks at midsummer in March. Through the mean streets near the train shed, soldiers and sailors plodded, dragging their sacks of clothing and gear.
Silver fox, Persian lamb, mink, filled the station, debouched on the cinders, swarming around hillocks of luggage and golf bags. The soldiers and sailors stayed near the wall of the depot or out next to the track.

A gunner's mate, wearing his whites and ribbons, carried a baby and one big valise out to the edge of the cinders. His wife had a small black suitcase and a blue furlough bag, bulging its canvas. A tiny girl, aged three or four, with a short, red plaid skirt, a red jacket and pigtail tied with red ribbons, clung to two of her fingers. The child carried a battered nude doll, half as big as herself.

The sailor set down his valise. His wife put down hers.
Don Corbett moved a step over to give them more space. He shifted his coat from one arm to the other, put down his own bag. His stomach felt queasy with last night's Scotch, this morning's depot counter coffee and snickers. His head ached. The pushing inside him was turned to jittery impatience. The long-dreamed elation of getting home had sunk to the ache of one man in a crowd, with no one to talk to. Everyone else seemed to have someone going along or saying goodbye.

The gunner's mate's wife accidentally nudged him when she reached to take her infant from its father's arms, said, "Oh, excuse me," and Corbett was grateful for that. She was thin, he saw, as service wives are, because they're so young and worry so much and don't eat enough since there's no man coming home for a meal and it's much too much bother to cook for yourself. She had looks, a school-girlish cuteness. Her eyes were bright green. Her mouse-brown long hair looked shiny and soft and well cared for. She was wearing a topcoat of fireman's red. Nobody would have taken her for the mother of two.

He smiled. "Okay. Okay. The baby looks swell."
"I'll say he does. Wonderful. A woman on the beach yesterday said she wouldn't believe he was only months. She said he looked like a year and a half."
"Sure does." He hugged the fat, wriggling mass of body and sweat and rompers against his whites. "Joanne looks wonderful, too." He yanked the little girl's pigtail. She cried: "Daddy, don't," without looking up.

"Remember to keep her away from the Good Humor man."
"Who's raising these kids? You or me?"
"All right, you are." He grinned

The gunner's mate tightened his grip on the baby. "I'll hold him," he said. "I'll carry him up on the train. You'll have him enough."

The sailor was skinny and freckled. He was wearing practicality all of the spectrum. Corbett caught a flash of the blue and white Navy Cross ribbon when the lad shifted the baby. The kid had been wriggling its fat little neck and the strings of its bonnet were coming undone. The gunner's mate tried to tie them with one hand and couldn't. His wife snatched off the bonnet. She said: "He won't need a cap on the train."

The kid had been sweating. His soft golden hairs were damp, stuck together and stood up in a comical point in the middle of his skull. The gunner's mate rolled the point with his fingers to twist in a curl. "He looks like a keumle," he said. "Remember those dolls?"
"You won one for me down at the island. I still have it some place."

"Give it to Joanne."
The little girl looked up when her name was mentioned. "I have my doll," she chimed. "Dolly's going for a ride on the train."

The sailor caressed the top of her hair with his free hand. "I sure was swell to see the kids. Not sorry you made the trip."
"Sorry?" His wife tossed her head. "Three months in Miami?"
"It was swell," he repeated. "Even the way we were living."

"I'd do it again. If we had to sleep on the beach." Her face broke of a sudden, went quivery like jelly. She struggled to pull it together before he could notice. Yet when she spoke her wife gave her away. "It was bitter and torn as if her throat hurt. 'You'd think they'd have left you here on shore duty. You did enough. Seventeen days on that raft.'"

He said quickly: "Skip it. Betty. Skip it, old kid." He touched her arm near the elbow. "I had three months here. That's a lot more than other guys had."
People were crowding around them and they fell suddenly speechless, embarrassed. Corbett glanced down the track, at the switch tower, the palms, the rails shimmering in sunlight. He was glad that the train still wasn't due. For a while more, he wanted to watch the gunner's mate and his wife and to listen to them. He knew that he wanted to see the man kiss her.

After a minute, the sailor said: "Well," and she answered, "Well!" and they gave each other a long, steady look. Then he said: "Well, take good care of my kids."
"Yours and who else's?" she flashed.
He smiled. "Okay. Okay. The baby looks swell."

"I'll say he does. Wonderful. A woman on the beach yesterday said she wouldn't believe he was only months. She said he looked like a year and a half."
"Sure does." He hugged the fat, wriggling mass of body and sweat and rompers against his whites. "Joanne looks wonderful, too." He yanked the little girl's pigtail. She cried: "Daddy, don't," without looking up.

"Remember to keep her away from the Good Humor man."
"Who's raising these kids? You or me?"
"All right, you are." He grinned broadly. His grin faded out into a wistful smile. "You know, I can remember the way he used to come down your mama's street every night in the summer, ringing his bell. You and me sitting out on the sunporch, watching the kids running out with their nickels. Which kind did I buy you? I bet you forgot."

"Fudge vanilla."
"Nope."
She screwed up her forehead. "Wasn't fudge?"
"Toasted coconut, dopey, remember?" He laughed and gave a mock sigh. "I used to dream about that on the raft. Toasted coconut ice-cream. . . . You keep the kid away from that guy this summer. You know how she is about ice-cream."

The little girl, hearing without seeming to listen, promptly piped: "Mommy, buy me some ice-cream."
"Not now, sweetie-ple." The sailor's wife took the child's hand. "The train's coming soon. We have to get on the train."

The gunner's mate shook his head. "I still don't see how you'll manage with only one seat."
"I've done it before. I suppose we have to be grateful they sold us that one." Her eyes glistened again. She craned her neck to glow at the crowd in the depot. "You would think they'd stay home and give us a chance."

He said: "Take it easy. Just take it easy, old kid."
The signals swung. The sun's gleaming pointer picked up the glass of a headlight far down the track, coming in from the yards. The gunner's mate's wife clutched her child's hand, pulled her back from the rails, reached for her bags.

The snout of a Diesel flashed past. Cars rumbled by as if they never intended to stop. The mob jostled forward. "Easy," the sailor shouted over the din. "Don't shove. There's plenty time. Where's Car 16?"

For an instant the couple ran to and fro in the short, frantic lunges of indecision. Corbett put his hand on the man's arm. "These are all Pullmans. Sixteen must be past the diner. I'm in that car. Give me one of your bags."

The couple didn't seem to have heard more than his direction. They ran, dragging their little girl and their luggage. Corbett stayed close behind them and when they got to the car, he scooped up the child and her doll and swung them up to the platform. The child groped back for her mother. He thought she was scared but she wasn't. She smiled at him, asked: "You coming up on my train?"

Her mother said: "Go right in. Joanne. I'm here, darling. Go in the car with the man."
The child's head brushed his hand. Her hair was like silk. He purposely held her close to his side till her mother came into the car, and panted: "All right, Joanne, come here, sweet," to her and "Thanks very much, sir," to him.

His seat, No. 5, was the inside chair next to the window, one back from the entrance. He folded his coat, took off his cap, put them both on the rack, hoisted his bag up beside them, sat down and stretched his long legs to the foot-rail. He thought: "This is it. Let's get started, get going."

District Garden Club Meeting Plans Made

Pickaway Clubs To Join In Session At Lake White

District 9, Regional meeting of the Ohio Association of Garden Clubs, will hold an all day session at the Lake White club, next Monday. The meeting is scheduled to start promptly at 10 a. m. District 9 includes Pickaway, Ross, Hocking and Jackson counties.

Chillicothe Garden club members under the leadership of Mrs. Joseph Vanmeter, will be hostesses to the group. Mrs. Donald H. Watt, regional director of division 9, will preside throughout the day.

Three minute reports will be heard from the presidents of the 27 clubs in this district. Each of the leaders will report on the work of her club during the past year. Mrs. Lon Oliver, Chillicothe, district chairman of nature schools and nature study, will give details concerning the nature camp to be held June 24 to the 28 at Camp Ohio.

Mrs. Orion King, Circleville, district chairman of programs and speakers, will explain the details of program material and speakers available in this district.

Contact chairman from each county will be heard. Mrs. R. V. Hammon, Deer Creek Garden club, will report in behalf of Pickaway county. Mrs. Ernest J. Grebe, Chillicothe Garden club, will make a report on Ross county and Mrs. D. H. Harshbarger, Jackson Garden club, will report for Jackson county.

Mrs. D. W. Van Patten, Dayton, state chairman of flower shows and judge schools, will be the main speaker on the program. She will prepare and discuss "Flower Arrangements." Mrs. Van Patten will conduct an elementary judging school for flower show judges in Columbus, next Tuesday, at the Community church, located at Cambridge boulevard and West First avenue. She will also be in charge of an advanced judging school June 19 and 20 at Ohio State university, Columbus.

Fred R. Keeler, Ross county agent, will speak on "Geology of Our District." Mrs. Frank E. Garry, Cincinnati, president of the Ohio Association of Garden clubs, will give a talk entitled, "Living With Our Flowers." Mrs. William H. Sloan, Cincinnati, state chairman of good gardening, will speak on "Good Gardening Hints" and Mrs. Thomas Wolfe, Athens, state chairman of programs and speakers, will give instructive information concerning preparation and publication of a year book for each club.

Professor Victor H. Ries, Ohio State University, state secretary of the Ohio Association of Garden clubs, will give the closing talk on the program. His subject will be "What's New In Gardening."

Regional directors who plan to be present in addition to Mrs. Watt are Mrs. I. E. Clayton, Dayton, district 3; Mrs. James Titus, Rutland, district 11; and Mrs. Norman Adams, Wheelersburg, district 10. A buffet luncheon will be served at the noon hour by members of the Chillicothe club.

WALNUT SENIORS ARE HONORED BY ALUMNI GROUP

In honor of the 26 members of the graduating class of Walnut township school, the Alumni association entertained with a banquet Saturday in the school building. One hundred and ninety four persons were present for the celebration.

Graduation ceremonies were held Thursday and on this occasion the former members of the senior class were welcomed into the Alumni association by Carl D. Bennett, superintendent of the school. Bob Smith, president of the class of '46 responded in behalf of his group.

Guests were seated at long tables adorned with Spring flowers in the school auditorium. Dinner was served by candle light by members of the Nebraska grange. Blue and white nut cups in the shapes of baskets and flowers completed the table decorations.

Mrs. Norman Pontius played two accordian numbers for the entertainment of the guests and Mrs. Melvin Kiger led group singing. Officers of the class of '46, in addition to Mr. Smith, included Richard Bumgarner, vice president; John Bell, secretary; and Virginia Monroe, treasurer.

Officers of the Alumni association are Raymond Riegel, president and Gladys Hines, secretary-treasurer. Everett Beers acted as toastmaster of the evening.

Following the brief dinner program the auditorium was cleared for dancing. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett and Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Hines lead the grand march which opened the ball. The remainder of

Martha Littleton Is the Bride Of Emil Peter Magnus

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Downs Littleton, formerly of Circleville and now residing in Orlando, Fla., announce the marriage of their daughter, Martha Virginia, to Emil Peter Magnus, Orlando. The ceremony took place April 25, at the Goss Memorial Methodist Church in Orlando.

The couple had as attendants, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond McGlaughlin, Columbus.

The bride came for her wedding in a blue suit with small violet ribbon hat and corsage of white gladioli. Mrs. McGlaughlin wore a beige costume accented with a pink gladioli corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. Magnus will reside in Orlando. The new Mrs. Magnus was formerly from this city.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

To treat a chamois duster to make it dustless, pour 2 tablespoons of furniture polish into a glass jar so that the inside is completely coated. Place the chamois in the jar and leave it for a day or two. It will absorb the oil evenly. When it becomes soiled, wash and repeat the treatment.

The evening was spent in round and square dancing.

The celebration was proclaimed a big success by all who attended.

4,000 Delegates At 55th DAR Congress

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 20—Peacetime policies were expected to be drawn up at the 55th continental congress of the Daughters of American Revolution which opened here today with 4,000 delegates in attendance.

Mrs. Julius Y. Talmadge, Athens, Ga., president general of the group, said the current meeting is expected to be the last one held away from Constitution Hall in Washington.

"We have been unable to meet for two years," Mrs. Talmadge said. "During that time our war projects have been converted into post-war projects. More planning remains to be done so that the D.A.R. can successfully perform the tasks which lie ahead."

Mrs. Josephine Heffner, Westerville, has returned home after visiting her sister Mrs. Luella Reichelderfer, East Franklin street, and Mrs. E. O. Friece, East Main street.

Mrs. Stuart R. Bolin, Columbus, was the week-end guest of Miss Mary McCrady, Watt street.

Many From Here Attend Meeting Of Catholic Women

First quarterly meeting of the southern deanery of the Columbus Diocese of National Council of Catholic women was held in the school hall of Holy Redeemer church, Portsmouth, Sunday.

The Rt. Rev. Monsignor Joseph Casey, chancellor of the diocese of Columbus and moderator of the Diocesan Council of Catholic Women addressed the meeting. The Very Rev. Frank J. Kreuskamp, Chillicothe, dean of the Southern district, also addressed the group, together with the departmental chairmen.

Immediately following the meeting the group attended benediction in a body in Holy Redeemer Church.

A tea and social hour in the school hall concluded the day's activities.

Approximately three hundred were present for the meeting. Those attending from St. Joseph's Parish in Circleville were Miss Rose Good, president of the local Parish Council, Mrs. John Riley, delegate-at-large for the Southern Deanery, Mrs. W. A. Goeller, Mrs. T. O. Gilliland, Mrs. Tom Lake, Mrs. Doyle Haas, Mrs. Don

WHERE SKATERS ONCE GLIDED merrily about to modern fox-trots and Strauss waltzes, workmen prepare the interior (top) of the New York City Building, Flushing, N. Y., for future meetings of the United Nations General Assembly. The building and grounds, on the site of the 1939-40 World's Fair, are being revamped with New York City's Board of Estimate underwriting $1,250,000 of the expense involved. Beds of blooming tulips surround the structure (bottom) which will be used until a permanent site is chosen. (International)

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

Lots of Bloom for Little Care

PEONIES, once planted, are permanent garden residents. They are one of the hardiest and easily grown perennials. And they give lots of blooms in return for very little care.

Giving peonies generous feedings of liquid manure when the flower buds appear will result in larger and finer blooms.

When mass effect of color is desired do not disbud peonies. To secure fair-sized blooms, disbud only a few of the side buds but not all. In order to obtain large, specimen blooms they need to be disbudded.

This is done by removing the side buds and leaving only the large central bud at the top of the stem, as shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph. Disbudding is usually done when the buds are about the size of green peas. The blossoms of peonies should be cut with a sharp knife leaving a clean cut and not crushed tissue. Cut the flowers either early in the morning or late in the evening.

In the case of the single, semi-double and Japanese peonies, cut the blooms when the buds are still fairly tight, as illustrated. Cut double peonies when the bud is partly open.

Like asparagus, peony plants need a lot of foliage over summer in order to bloom again next year. Therefore, for the good of the plant leave at least two or more of the lower leaves when cutting the flower.

YOU'RE TELLING ME!

Since international complications seem to thrive there, Zadok Dumkopf suggests they rename that section of the world the Middle East.

If you don't think the old days had advantages—which would you rather hear, the melody of a far-off steam locomotive whistle or the blast of a Diesel engine horn?

With major league teams taking to air transportation the Phillies at last will get a chance to climb as high as the others.

Amid all this international wrangling Switzerland is quiet. Could the yodelers be out on a strike?

A Minister Looks At the News

But one cannot become a world-traveler unless he can pay the price. And you, a young graduate, need more than enthusiasm and preparation. You, too, must be willing to pay the price. Can you be contented with wearing second-hand clothes while others wear the latest? Will you go right on studying, burning the midnight oil to acquire more knowledge while your friends are burning the headlights on Dad's automobile?

Oliver Wendell Holmes once spoke of the people who "die with all their music in them." He referred to the many people who have splendid potentialities which are unrealized. They never use their hidden resources to make themselves into the people they might be. The "possible you" is never developed.

Centuries ago when parchments for writing were scarce, one which had already been used would be covered over and written on a second time. On such manuscripts, known by librarians as palimpsest, the original writing could be deciphered only after the letters which appeared on the surface had been scraped away. So every person has qualities which lie so deep within that they can never be released by one who lives only on the surface of life. You can become the man or woman you might be only when you find a high cause to stir your hidden devotion, a great affection to arouse your love, a spiritual Master to energize your soul.

The writing on your diploma may be deciphered in one of two ways—it will either say, depending entirely upon you, "This is the end" or "This is the beginning!" If it is the former, then you die with all your music in you; if the latter, then mobilize your resources: your enthusiasm, your preparation, your willingness to pay the price. Let your diploma be your "passport to Life!"

Opinions expressed by the writer in this column are the views of the author and not necessarily those of the Circleville Herald.

High School Seniors May Become Teachers In Few Months

DR. HISSONG ANNOUNCES NEW SPEEDUP PLAN

Need For Teachers Results In Cadet Certificate Program In State

Seniors graduating this spring from high schools in Circleville and Pickaway county as well as throughout Ohio can be teaching school within 15 months.

This was disclosed Monday in an announcement by Dr. Clyde Hissong, state director of education, who said at Columbus that Ohio high school seniors now graduating may be eligible for teaching posts as early as September, 1947.

Dr. Hissong explained that this is the main provision of a new streamlined teacher-training plan.

"We are out to make the teaching profession in Ohio attractive, especially in the elementary grades, and we need intelligent graduating high school seniors in large numbers to help meet the growing acute teacher shortage," Dr. Hissong frankly pointed out.

Ohio needs a minimum of 2,000 elementary school teachers by this fall and by 1950 will have to provide facilities for 100,000 additional pupils in Ohio elementary schools due to the present population trends.

The new plan provides for a 4-year Provisional "Cadet" Teaching certificate to be issued to high school graduates who successfully complete 63 semester hours of training in one of 30 Ohio teacher-training institutions this summer, the next regular school year, and the summer of 1947.

The pattern of "Cadet" training from June 1946 to September 1947 totaling 63 semester hours is as follows:

Subject Educational Psychology, 2 Semester Hours, Principles of teaching, 2 Semester Hours, School organization and management, 2 Semester hours, Methods: Reading, 3 Semester Hours, Arithmetic (and other skills) 3 Semester Hours, Content (Social science, etc.) 3 Semester Hours, Student teaching, 5 Semester Hours, Art: Graphic expression, 2 Semester Hours, Materials and methods, 2 Semester Hours, English (including speech), 8 Semester Hours, Children's Literature, 2 Semester Hours, Health Activities, 3 Semester Hours, Music: Introduction to music, 2 Semester Hours, Music education, 2 Semester Hours, Science: General science or biology, 4 Semester Hours, Social Studies: World and European History, 3 Semester Hours, American History, 3 Semester Hours, Sociology, 3 Semester Hours, Principles of Geography, 3 Semester Hours, Elective courses in addition to the above, 6 Semester Hours, Total, 63 Semester Hours.

The "Cadet" certificate differs from the Provisional Certificate previously granted in that evidence of successful experience and the completion of 12 semester hours of additional training will be required for its renewal, Dr. Hissong stated.

After 24 months of successful teaching, the "Cadet" teacher will receive the 8-year Professional Certificate upon evidence of having satisfactorily completed 90 semester hours of credit in elementary education. The Permanent Certificate will be granted to the holder of a Professional Elementary Certificate upon evidence of 40 months of successful teaching and a Bachelor's Degree in Elementary Education.

Ohio teacher-training institutions approved for the preparation of elementary teachers are: University of Akron, Ashland College, Athens College, Baldwin-Wallace College at Berea, Bowling Green State University, Capital University at Columbus, Cedarville College, University of Cincinnati, University of Dayton, Defiance College, John Carroll University at Cleveland, Kent State University, Mary Manse College at To-
